the white race which inhabited the rolling prairies, extending from the moutainous area in Central Asia to the heart of Europe.

The Versailles Peace Conference was also aware that the Khazars fought their way into Armenia with the Barsileens in 198 A.D. where they were repulsed but returned to attack again. Their quest for plunder and revenge appeared the only motives of the early expeditions against each other of those roving tribal nations. The Khazars had assumed political importance in the long struggle between the Roman and Persian empires, when Armenia was often the battlefield and eventually the prize. Armenia was inclined to look upon civilization with favor and before long was inclined to favor the Christianity of Rome. Because Armenia's Arsacid nobles prolonged their feuds with the Asasanids of Persia, the policy of the Persian kings was to obtain help from the Khazars between 200 A.D. and 350 A.D.

During the 4th century A.D., the growing power of Persia resulted in the annexation of eastern Armenia. The Khazars fearing to have such a powerful neighbor, ended their relationship with Persia. The Khazars made an alliance with the distant Byzantium which thereafter remained their foreign policy. They aided Julian in his invasion of Persia in 363 A.D. Upon the approach of Persia to the Caucasus, the violently cruel empire of the Huns sprang up among the Ugrians of the northern prairies.

The Khazars were threatened on all sides but they remained peaceful until their danger culminated in the rise to power of Attila in 434 A.D. Emperor Theodisius sent envoys to bribe the Khazars to divert the Huns from the empire by an attack on their flank. But among the Khazars there was a group favorable to the Huns. The conspiracy was betrayed to Attila who quickly ended their independence. The Khazar kingdom thereupon became subject to Attila's son, and became the center of government among the eastern subjects of the Huns about 448 A.D.

The iron rule of Attila was preferable to the anarchy that succeeded Attila's rule. Upon Attila's death in 454 A.D., the extensive uncontrolled immigration which Attila had ended was revived. The Khazars and the Saragours, possibly the white Ogors, and possibly the Barsileens of the Volga area, were swept along in the flood of mixed Tartar peoples which the conquest of the Avars had set in motion.

The Khazars with their allied tribal nations penetrated the Persian defenses of the Caucasus. They occupied the territory as far as the Kur and Aras Rivers, and roamed at will through Iberia, Georgia and Armenia. The Persian king implored Emperor Leo I to help him defend Asia Minor at the Caucasus in 457 A.D., but Rome was too hard pressed at the time to help him. It thereafter required fifty years of warfare to drive the Khazars back and to fortify the Pass of Derbent against them in 507 A.D.

Throughout the 6th century, the Khazar kingdom became the route over which the wild hordes, to whom the Huns had opened the passage into Europe, then populated large areas in Europe. The Khazars were compelled to take refuge from them among the seventy mouths of the Volga River, exactly like the Venetians from Attila. The pressure of the Turks in Asia forced the Avars westward into Europe. The conquering Turks however followed the Avars westward into Europe between 560 A.D. and 580 A.D. They defeated all opposition there and wrested the Bosphorous in the Crimea from the empire. By the annihilation of the Ephthalites, they completed the ruin of the white race of the plains between the Oxus and the Don River.

The empires of the Turks and the Avars swiftly ran their courses. Thereupon the Khazars arose out of the chaos to greater renown than their former prominence among the other nations which rose and fell in that area. The agricultural Slavs of the Dneiper and the Oka were reduced to tribute to the Khazars. Before the end of the 7th century A.D. the Khazars annexed the Crimea. They had won a complete command of the Sea of Azov. The Khazars seized the narrow strip of land which separates the Volga from the Don Rivers and there organized the portage which has since continued as an important link in the traffic between Asia and Europe.

The Khazars renewed the alliance with Byzantium. In alliance with them they conducted a campaign against Persia in 589 A.D. The Khazars had also appeared in Armenia. The Khazars were described by them as "Turks from the East." The Khazars were powerful enough to hold the coasts of the Caspian Sea and the Euxine. They exacted tribute from the Viatitish, the Severians, and the Polyane. The Khazar king was enticed by the promise of an imperial princess to furnish Heraclius with 40,000 soldiers for his Persian war. Though overpowered in the end, the Khazars protected the plains of Europe from further Islamic incursions. The Caucasus became the limit of their advances.

In the interval between the decline of Islamic influence and the rise of Russia, the Khazars reached the zenith of their power. The ruling Khazar population was converted about 740 A.D. to the monotheistic religious faith known in modern times as Judaism. The Khazar king was held in high esteem at the Byzantium court. Emperor Justinian Rhinotmetus took refuge with the Khazar king during his exile, and married his daughter in 720 A.D. Justinian's rival, Vardenes by name, also sought asylum in the Khazar kingdom. In 775 A.D., Leo IV the grandson of the Khazar ruler, ascended the Byzantine throne. Khazar troops were amongst the bodyguard of the Byzantine court.

However, it was not from one of these powers, but from a power that the Khazar rulers had not taken into consideration, that the overthrow of the Khazars came. The arrival of the Varengians in 882 A.D. from the Swedish peninusula across the Baltic Sea, into the midst of the large population of scattered Slavs, united the Slav population into a nation for the first time in their history. The advance of the Petchenegs from the east gave the Russians their opportunity. Before the fierce onslaught of these peoples, the weakened rule of the Khazars collapsed. The Khazar kingdom dwindled rapidly in size to within its former borders, between the Caucasus, the Volga and the Don. The traders of Novgorod and Kiev replaced the Khazars as the caravans between Constantinople and the North.

The Khazar kingdom neither produced natural resources nor provided manufactured products. Their only source of income was the large revenue they derived from the use by other nations of their highway caravan routes which foreigners were compelled to use, to pass through the Khazar kingdom to market their products. When the Khazar kingdom was ultimately attacked by Swiatoslav of Kiev with large Russian armed forces, the crumbling Khazar kingdom crumbled and collapsed. Swiatoslav's Russian armed forces were equally at home on land and water. Sarkel, Itil and Semender surrendered to Swiatoslav of Kiev between 965 A.D. and 969 A.D. Swiatoslav of Kiev extended his conquests to the Caucasus where he established Russian colonies on the Sea of Azov. The principality of Tmutaraken, founded by his grandson Matislave in 988 A.D., replaced the kingdom of the Khazars, the last trace of which was extinguished by a joint expedition of the Russian and Byzantine armed forces in 1016 A.D.

The eastern European so-called Jews of Khazar ancestry were unable to restore the sovereign Khazar state after their defeat by the Russians and the annexation of the territory and population of the Khazar kingdom by the Russian empire. That is history. Zionists are attempting to repeat in the Middle East their performance in east Europe. European so-called Jews of Khazar ancestry waged war against the Christians and Moslems in the Middle East in their attempt to establish a sovereign Khazar state in the Middle East. They were unable to restore the Khazar kingdom in eastern Europe.

It would be the height of stupidity, and probably suicidal as well, for the United States to assist being railroaded into the Middle East crisis any more deeply than it is today. Every effort should be made to extricate this country from the position into which it was railroaded under the direction of corrupt Christian politicians in the United States. What excuse can there be for the United States to use its power and prestige to aid crooks to hold onto their stolen loot? Every square foot of land illegally and immorally occupied by them in the Middle East between 1920 and 1969 is land stolen from Christian and Moslem Arabs.

The eastern European so-called Jews of Asian Mongoloid Turco-Finn ethnic origin and Khazar ancestry call their illegal and immoral regime in Palestine the State of Israel. The word "Israel" in the Semitic language means "in the service of God." That name was chosen by Zionists to throw sand into the eyes of the Christian world. Christians see the word "Israel" on every page of their Bible. But in view of the slaughter of innocent men, women and children in Palestine by the eastern European so-called Jews of Khazar ancestry, the United States becomes an accessory after the fact to this slaughter by support of the barbarian Zionist aggressors in occupation of the Middle East territory by naked aggression.

The readers of Common Sense will prevent a great calamity for this country by doing two things. Firstly, write a letter to President Nixon protesting against all support for the so-called State of Israel. Secondly, purchase one hundred, five hundred, or a thousand copies of this issue of Common Sense and circulate them in your community, in your city and state, and throughout the United States. Your immediate attention to both requests may mean salvation for this country. Obey that impulse. Act now.

It is an insult to the intelligence of the Christian 97% of our population for eastern European so-called Jews of Khazar ancestry to allege they are the "chosen people" seeking to be "repatriated" to their "ancestral homeland," to their "promised land." The criminal Zionist conspiracy is founded only upon lies, and lies and more lies. Zionists have never advanced one reason to justify their aggression in Palestine that was not proven to be just another one of their gigantic lies without a shred of truth in it.

The Christian 97% of our population can never now say they were not warned of their peril in time to save themselves. The President and the Congress of the United States are inviting another civil war if they railroad the United States into another world war. The Christian 97% of the United States must petition Congress to end all relations with the so-called State of Israel. If United States foreign policy in the Middle East continues to be determined by eastern European so-called Jews, the future of the United States is in danger. The life-span of the United States will reflect the steps taken to end Zionist rule of the United States. Write President Nixon the day this issue of Common Sense is received by you. The Christian 97% of our population still has time to save their country and themselves. May God help us too.

Common Sense.
